

In regards to the above referenced proceeding. I am very satisfied with the current "Do Not Call" rule implemented in the State of Indiana. I work at home and used to receive several annoying phone calls per week. Even though I would ask to be taken off of call lists there were neverending calls from all kinds of solicitors. Since the implementation of the Indiana Telephone Privacy Law the number of calls has fallen off to almost none. I am very pleased with this and do not want to see this ruling diluted in any way by lower Federal standard regulations.

The current Indiana Telephone Privacy Law has greatly enhanced not only my work time, but also my family life and privacy in the evenings. I deeply resent being interrupted by unsolicited phone calls in the privacy of my own home. If I need or want something I will seek it out in my own time. I don't need my private telephone line to be another avenue of commercial solicitation without my consent.
